What is Peer Academic Coaching?

Peer Academic Coaching is designed to help students improve their performance in class and study smarter. Peer Academic Coaches (PACs) help with everything from time management to goal setting to motivation.

What does a PAC do?

PACs meet one-on-one with students in the SSC to develop time management skills and build active study strategies. PACs receive two days of training before the semester begins and participate in ongoing training as the semester progresses. They are educated in learning styles, goal setting, test preparation, and active listening. PACs work in a supportive environment and serve as mentors to a new group of Rising Scholars each semester.

How much are PACs paid?

Starting pay is $9.00/hr. PACs have opportunities for advancement through experience and continued training.
