Black History Month 2025: A history of music in Alabama and Huntsville

Taking a closer look at Huntsville's vibrant music scene, past and present

UAH hosted "A History of Music in Alabama and Huntsville" on Feb. 25 in partnership with the City of Huntsville's Music Office and Downtown Huntsville, Inc. Local historian William Hampton and Huntsville Music Board member Codie Gopher delighted the audience with stories of Huntsville's little-known ties to the entertainment world past and present – from blues to rock to soul to funk to hip-hop. The event also featured live performances by UAH students.

UAH wins $1.35M Army grant to advance human interactions with artificial intelligence

An interdisciplinary faculty group from UAH has been awarded a $1.35 million grant from the U.S. Army Combat Capabilities Development Command Analysis Center to support advancements in human-systems integration analysis and artificial intelligence (AI).

“Modern, complex systems, such as autonomous systems, are fundamentally interdisciplinary,” says Dr. Bryan Mesmer, the principal investigator and associate professor of Industrial & Systems Engineering and Engineering Management (ISEEM). “To address the challenges associated with these interdisciplinary systems, it is necessary to approach them through an interdisciplinary lens.”
