What is PASS/PLUS?
The Peer Assisted Study Sessions (PASS) and Peer-Led Undergraduate Study (PLUS) Programs offer regularly scheduled review sessions in several historically difficult courses at UAH. Both PASS and PLUS provide an active learning environment in which students can work together to better understand course content and develop stronger study skills. Sessions are facilitated by leaders, current students who have previously done well in the course and have been trained to make sure students get the most out of each session.

What is the role of a leader?
Leaders facilitate group study sessions outside of class to review and reinforce course content and study strategies. They are also expected to create and submit session plans each week, attend monthly training workshops, maintain regular contact with their faculty member and students, communicate with program supervisors, participate in SSC-wide events, and maintain accurate records in our software system. PASS leaders work an average of 8-9 hours per week and PLUS leaders work at average of 5-6 hours per week.

How much are leaders paid?
Leaders earn between $10-12/hour, depending upon length of time with the program.
